March 9, 2020

The Nashville Jazz Workshop has cancelled this week’s NJW community performances out of caution about the possible spread of the coronavirus COVID-19. Until we have more information on how rapidly the disease is spreading, we believe the safest course is to limit large gatherings where people could potentially be exposed.

This affects the following scheduled performances:

- Monday, March 9, 7pm at Two Old Hippies, Music of Stevie Wonder
- Wednesday, March 11, 7pm at Steinway Piano Gallery, Music of Rodgers & Hart
- Sunday, March 15, 3pm at Frist Art Museum, Jazz on The Move

At this time, we are NOT cancelling this week’s regularly scheduled classes at the NJW offices on Elm Hill Pike. We will take steps to disinfect the classrooms and we discourage any staff or students from attending if they have any symptoms of illness. Future classes may be cancelled as circumstances warrant - check the website or social media for updates.

We regret any inconvenience this late notice may cause.